

Military In Funds Plea With Chief

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Pentagon's uniformed chiefs made their pitch to the commander in chief Friday for the money and manpower they want for the war in Viet Nam and other defense needs.

CIVILIAN CHIEFS

The civilian chiefs — Secretary Robert S. McNamara and Undersecretary Cyrus R. Vance — were on hand, too, for the budget conference with President Johnson.

Johnson himself will make the final decisions on who gets how much from the whopping military budget, already spiraling as a result of the Viet Nam war, and certain to grow even bigger in the fiscal year starting next July 1.

Johnson, presiding in his office at the LBJ Ranch 65 miles west of Austin, opened day-long budget discussion by hearing out the military leaders.

In addition to McNamara and Vance, those taking part in the defense money talk were Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Gen. Harold K. Johnson, Army chief of staff; Adm. David J. McDonald, Navy chief of staff; Gen. John P. McConnell, Gen. Wallace M. Greene, Marine Corps commandant.

Johnson's decisions on defense spending in general and the Viet Nam war in particular may not become known until next month when the budget goes to Congress.

The cost of fighting the war already appears to be running at the rate of about $6 billion a year — about $16.5 million daily — and is expected to rise in direct proportion to increased U.S. participation.

Illustrating how costs have gone up, McNamara told a news conference last April that "the cost of the U.S. forces operating in waters of South Viet Nam and in the air and the cost of our advisory and logistical support is running on the order of $800 million a year."

Since then U.S. military strength has risen from about 29,000 troops in South Viet Nam and some 27,000 aboard the 7th Fleet ships offshore to 165,700 in Viet Nam and about 60,000 aboard ships.

In early May, Johnson asked and received a $700-million supplemental appropriation to meet war costs. After it was decided to send big reinforcements, he went back to Congress and got an additional $1.7 billion in supplemental funds.

Indications now are that Johnson will ask another $5 billion or so for the present fiscal year, and will include at least $5 billion for supporting the U.S. military effort in Southeast Asia in fiscal 1967.

While Johnson has directed members of the Cabinet and department heads to take the primary step for pruning their own budgets, he will make the Defense Department decisions, it appeared.

By way of emphasizing this, Budget Director Charles L. Schultze stood aside during the discussion of defense spending.

But he joined as Johnson turned his attention later in the day to some other big spenders.

Two Accidents In Investigations

Three persons were injured late Friday when their car went out of control and slammed into a utility pole in the 2200 block of Paragoud Blvd.

The injured were identified as Terry Kincaid, 403 Audubon Dr.; Thomas Younse, 18, 207 Arlington, West Monroe, and Phillip Miller, no address given.

Police were investigating the accident early today and no details were available on extent of injuries.

Another accident which occurred at N. 10th and Hilton Streets in Monroe some 10 minutes apart from the one on Paragoud Boulevard, was also being investigated by Monroe police. No details were available early today.

Marines Hurt Cong In Trap Movements

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — U.S. Marines shot up outlying guerrilla platoons Friday and, teaming with Vietnamese troops, sought to trap a regiment or more of hard core Viet Cong who had dug in to hold a coastal valley south of Da Nang. But it was slow going.

Eighty miles down the coast, U.S. 7th Fleet gunners drove off two battalions of Viet Cong besieging Due Pho. Casualties among the government garrison at Due Pho, 29 miles southeast of Quang Ngai City, were reported light.

Guerrillas lobbed 14 mortar shells at a Voice of America relay station on the outskirts of Hue, the old imperial capital 400 miles north of Saigon. There was no immediate announcement.

Gemini 7 Soars At Mid Mark

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Gemini 7 astronauts Frank Borman and James Lovell soared toward the midway point of their 14-day space marathon Friday so cocky and confident that Borman argued with flight directors over who should fly in his underwear. The astronaut lost.

BUSIEST DAY On their "busiest day yet," the record-setting space twins coped with hoarseness, dry noses, minor fuel cell worries, balky experiments and the problem of who should be out of his bulky space suit and who should not. Flight Director Christopher C. Kraft Jr. finally ordered Borman to strip off his suit and Lovell to get back into his. It was the first known outerspace argument.

Everything was set for a Sunday afternoon rendezvous with two astronauts aboard Gemini 6. Weather and equipment were "go" for a Gemini liftoff Sunday from Cape Kennedy.

Soaring through their 92nd orbit, Borman got into an argument of sorts with Gemini control at Houston over a proposal that Lovell—now in his fourth day of "long john" flying—get back into his spacesuit while Borman shucked his 16-pound life-supporting suit. The space agency has ruled for safety's sake that only one man at a time be out of his suit.

Both men would have to be suited up for the delicate nose-to-nose rendezvous Sunday with Gemini 6. It takes 7 minutes to get out of a suit and 12 minutes to get into one—on the ground with room to maneuver. It takes longer in a space capsule and is hard work in a weightless state.

It had been a hectic day. I feel like I was born up here," said command pilot Borman as he worked through the day in space.

He added that "I feel fine. I'm a little sleepy but Lovell is bouncing all over the place."

To keep them continually occupied while they whirled around awaiting their Sunday rendezvous attempt with Gemini 6, the overnight shift in Mission Control lined up a full day of photographic and other experiments.

But bad weather and an equipment failure on the ground prevented the second attempt in two days to establish voice communications with an earth station by using laser beam of intense light.

100 Second Limit Made

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — Astronauts Walter Schirra and Thomas Stafford were all set Friday for a Sunday blastoff that must be timed to within 100 seconds if America's historic space rendezvous is to be carried out on schedule.

The Gemini 6 pilots are scheduled to lift off at 9:54 a.m. EST Sunday and catch up with the orbiting Gemini 7 spacecraft five hours and 40 minutes later high over the Indian Ocean.

The meeting will take place in darkness and will demonstrate that America has the know-how to bring together two vehicles in space—a must for later trips to the moon.

Gemini 7 will be visually identifiable by its blinking tail lights and the chase ship will have a 4,000-candlepower spotlight. Sophisticated electronic devices will allow Gemini 6 to zero in on the target ship, and then the two spacecraft will go whizzing around the globe at 17,500 mph — perhaps only inches apart.

The crews may get a look at each other through clear-glass observation windows in the nose sections of their spacecraft.

Parade Weather Predicted Mild

Partly cloudy skies should prevail throughout the Twin Cities today, with mild temperatures predicted for parade watchers during the 10 a.m. annual Christmas parade in downtown Monroe.

High temperatures today should range from 68 to 74, while overnight lows should be 50 to 56 degrees.

The weather extremes Friday were 52 at 5 a.m. and 73 at 2 p.m., according to FAA at Selman Field.

Winds today should be southerly at five to 15 miles an hour.

inspire area citizens, in an unusual way, to the hope that the Christmas Spirit will prevail, and the goal of $6,500 will be reached.

At this point however, many have yet to receive the blessing that comes from helping others. Over $4,580 is needed to fulfill the hope.

The hope of one very elderly man is as follows: "A toy and some fruit for my grandson". They live alone, and after the rent and utility bills are met, there is nothing. The old man, grown philosophical perhaps, could go through another Christmas with nothing, but does not expect his young grandson to be able to understand.

In past years, one family of nine, Goodfellows note, was able to enjoy and even aid others in having a happy Christmas. Without a father now, times are harder for the family, especially for the children when Christmas comes around. COMMITMENTS FACED

"It is of the most importance," that the Communists clearly recognize the United States will live up to its commitments in Viet Nam and other world trouble spots, Rusk said. "Otherwise the structure of peace right around the world could disintegrate," he told 1,000 labor delegates to the AFL-CIO's 10th anniversary convention.

While fighting in Viet Nam "we must get on with organizing the peace" through the United Nations and other international organizations.

"We shall continue to gnaw at the problem of disarmament and try to break through the fog of distrust."

Rusk expressed hope that disarmament meetings in January will "make some progress, particularly on nonproliferation of nuclear weapons."

He emphasized nations must prevent a recurrence of global conflict, warning: "The survival of man is no longer a figure of speech!"

Beautification Aims For Hick's Interstate Junk

CONYERS, Ga. (AP) — The most surprised junkyard operator in Georgia is Willie Hicks, who operates a business on Interstate 20. His was the first project in Georgia to be included in the federal highway beautification program, and possibly the first in the nation.

But nobody told Hicks except a newsman. The federal government is putting up most of the money and the state is doing the work.

"I think it's right nice of them," Hicks said, "especially since I was going to do it myself."

It will take about 2,000 feet of trees, shrubs and vines and $2,500 to screen the junkyard, which Hicks, 56, has operated since 1950. The yard contains about 300 wrecked automobiles.

The trees and shrubs have been ordered and the State Highway Department says they will be planted along the Interstate 20 right-of-way within the next few days.

Hicks, who operates a garage at the junkyard, said he already has moved some of the wrecked cars to make room for a high top chain link fence which he had planned to support the vines.

"I think the federal program is good, and I think everybody ought to cooperate," he said.

The highway department design engineer, John Wilkerson, said, "We don't have to notify anybody. We've got a federal law that tells us what we have to do. All we have to do is do it."

Wilkerson said that as far as he knows, Hicks' junkyard, about 25 miles east of Atlanta, is the first in the nation to be screened under the beautification program. The interstate highway is an east-west artery across northern Georgia.

Wilkerson said the screening will include, red maples, willow oaks, redbuds, dogwoods and red cedars. Shrubs and vines such as Russian olive, ligustrum and Carolina jasmine will be used to cover the right-of-way fence and block the view beneath the trees. A total of 18 trees, 150 shrubs and 99 vines will be planted.

Plane Will Replace 2 Now In Use

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — President Johnson gave the go-ahead Friday for a new high-speed bomber to cost $1.75 billion, but flashed a slow-down signal on domestic spending.

TFX MODIFICATION

To be known as the FB111, it will be a modification of the F111, the controversial fighter once called the TFX.

The Pentagon's civilian and uniformed chiefs conferred with Johnson for more than three hours at his ranch near Johnson City. Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara later told a news conference here about plans for the new bomber.

McNamara said the FB111 will fly twice as fast as the latest model of the B52, have equal range, and far greater capacity to penetrate enemy territory. The latest B52 has a speed of about 650 miles an hour and 9,000-mile range.

The defense chief told of plans for the new bomber when asked for his comment on criticism by members of Congress and others of his decision to retire 425 older B52s and all B58s over the next few years.

"They spoke too soon," McNamara said.

McNamara said the next session of Congress will be asked to authorize the entire $1.75-billion FB111 program, but declined to estimate how fast the money will be spent.

He said, however, that the first of the new bombers will be in operation in 1968 with all to be ready by 1971.

McNamara said the FB111 would be capable of strategic and tactical missions, and equipped to carry either nuclear or conventional bombs. He placed its load capacity at 50 high-explosive bombs weighing 750 pounds each.

McNamara said this country's bomber force now is four times that of the Soviet Union. He foresees no material change in this ratio of superiority at least through the next decade.

He said this country now has 680 heavy bombers. The total will drop to about 465 by the end of the decade. The force then will be made up of 255 late-model B52s, retained in service, plus the 210 new FB111s.

McNamara said General Dynamics Corp., which builds the F111 in its plant in Fort Worth, Tex., will build the new bomber.

McNamara declined to give any figures on defense spending in the next fiscal year. But he said he, Deputy Secretary Cyrus R. Vance, and members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff agree unanimously on about 99 per cent of the spending items.

There is some disagreement on items he termed relatively insignificant.

McNamara disclosed that the United States now has 180,000 troops in Viet Nam, the highest official figure yet announced, but declined to discuss any further buildup of forces there.

He described bombings of North Viet Nam as justified from a military point of view. But when asked about the possibility of halting them with the aim of encouraging peace talks, he said he couldn't add to earlier statements on that subject by Secretary of State Dean Rusk. Rusk has said any halt would be meaningless unless the North Vietnamese are ready to talk peace.

Counselor Wins Audiences In Week Here; Success Analyzed

By TRAVIS MAYO
World Staff Writer

A man described as "One of the most beloved personalities of the South" has left his mark on the hearts and minds of parents and youngsters alike during his exceedingly busy week in this area.

Dr. Chester Swor, of Jackson, Miss., author, counselor and lecturer, has dispensed his subscription to high ideals of living to the students and faculty of West Monroe High School each day this past week, while also holding frank discussions with parents at evening gatherings and at an informal dinner speech.

This short, bespectacled, graying man — veteran of a million lectures — has won over full audiences on one hand and, on the other, has talked earnestly with hundreds of individual students in private conferences.

Dr. Swor, born in Mount

Olive, Miss., annually travels more than 25,000 miles conducting spiritual emphasis weeks and counseling with young people in colleges, churches and summer assemblies.

The secret of his overwhelming success with teen-agers may be revealed in a statement he made to a gathering of fathers this week. Teen-agers feel they can confide in him their most pressing and secret inner anxieties. "I admire teen-agers more now than I did when I was young," Dr. Swor told members and guests of the Kiwanis Club of West Monroe at their regular weekly meeting, "because you would almost have had to be a brigand to go wrong in the small-town protective atmosphere in which we grew to maturity."

Likewise, Dr. Swor is popular with adults for that same reason. They admire his frankness. "If your son grows up to be like you — will that be good enough?" This challenge put serious expressions on the faces of fathers who heard Dr. Swor speak Thursday at the Kiwanis luncheon at Highland Park Country Club.

But all is not serious with this little man who leans on the ever-present walking cane and looks you squarely in the eye. "You know," he will say with a chuckle, "I quote Ann Landers almost as much as I do old Solomon."

FORMER NUN

Sentenced In Rights Work

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — A former Roman Catholic nun who has been a leader in Milwaukee civil rights demonstrations was sentenced to 30 days in jail Friday by County Judge Christ T. Seraphim.

Miss Marilyn Morhauser, arrested along with three others earlier in the day and charged with disorderly conduct for helping another demonstrator try to chain himself to a truck at a school construction site, was given a choice by the court. Judge Seraphim asked her to promise to refrain from further demonstrations and "other unlawful activity." Miss Morhauser refused and asked for the jail sentence.

A member of a teaching order for some 20 years, Miss Morhauser was relieved of her vows last year, but no explanation was made public. She describes herself as still a Catholic.

Friday's demonstration was the latest in a series sponsored by the Milwaukee United School Integration Committee of which Miss Morhauser is secretary. The group contends that the new school, on the fringe of the Inner Core area, would be predominantly Negro and thus contribute to Milwaukee's alleged de facto segregation.

Sugar Plantation Owner Looks Forward To Change

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A refugee who owned a sugar plantation in Cuba looks forward eagerly to a new life in the United States, "even if it means sweeping floors or shoveling snow." He has never seen snow.

"I'll do any kind of work," said Oscar Poveda, one of dozens of Cubans fanning out daily throughout the United States. "I'll start a new career away from communism."

The optimism and apparent fearlessness of the 38-year-old migrant whose cane farm in Camaguey Province was confiscated by the Fidel Castro government in 1963 is typical of the refugee stream arriving by daily airlift from the Communist-ruled island. No thought of unemployment apparently enters the refugees' minds.

Poveda spoke as he, his wife and three children were outfitted with overcoats and other northern raiment before flying to Edgewater, N.J.

His sister, Leonila, lives there at 21 Russell Ave.

Some refugees, like Mr. and Mrs. Eduardo Sousa Gomez, who headed for sunny Los Angeles to join two daughters at 11160 Venice, skipped the winter garb made available to all at Freedom House, the Miami departure point.

Refugees also get meals and spending money at Freedom House, then transportation to their new U.S. home and $100 per family to start life there.

Sousa Gomez, who owned a restaurant in Havana, said he would get a job as a cook in Los Angeles.

"God willing, I will some day buy a restaurant there," the 54-year-old refugee said confidently.

Jose Garcia Garriga, a ruddy, bronzed 39-year-old farm worker, selected car muffs before flying to Tarrytown, N.Y., 33 Main St.

"I'll get some kind of job there," he said. "Why wouldn't I?"

This is his first time away from Las Villas Province, Cuba.

Maria Mendoza Marti, who went to Union City, N.J., the exile home of Rafael Gandara, her husband by proxy marriage, echoed the sentiment of many refugees: "I would like to remain in Miami, because of the warm climate and because here I feel almost as if I were in Cuba. But that is not possible, so I am happy to go elsewhere."

About one-third of the first week's airlift refugees remained with relatives in Miami, where the Cuban colony numbers nearly 100,000. New Jersey points attracted the second largest number. Others scattered to states from Georgia to Wisconsin.

Previous resistance from Miami's colony to resettlement of refugees to other cities apparently declined as emphasis was placed on joining relatives.

"Now everybody is thinking mainly of how to get more people out of Cuba," said Joaquin Godoy, well-known in the exile colony. "The people here used to think resettlement would hurt revolutionary groups trying to liberate Cuba. They wanted to be as close to Cuba as possible. But now anti-Castro organizations are expanding with branches in other cities."

But another exile, Augustin Puente, mechanic, said "We'd like to be resettled, but in a free Cuba."

Goldberg Hits Soviets On Subversion Support

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg accused the Soviet Union Friday of supporting subversion and terrorism as a means of overthrowing established governments in Southeast Asia and other parts of the world.

He delivered a counterblast in the General Assembly's Main Political Committee to bitter attacks upon U.S. policy in Viet Nam and Latin America made by Communist countries. They were voiced in debate on the general principle of intervention by one country into the domestic affairs of another. "We must recognize as a simple fact of life a most regrettable face — the Soviet doctrine of peaceful coexistence does not renounce and in fact permits subversion and terrorism," Goldberg said.

He rejected as distortions of truth charges by the Soviet Union and its ideological allies that the United States was guilty of aggression in Viet Nam.

He described the conflict there as "a prime example of the use of subversion terrorism and, now overt military intervention by one government, North Viet Nam, to overthrow another government, South Viet Nam."

He said the United States would continue to explore both within and outside the United Nations, all possible paths to a peaceful settlement that would be both durable and honorable.

He declared the United States was ready to accept a British proposal to convene a conference and arrange a cease-fire in Viet Nam, and then work out a peaceful settlement.

He added that if the Soviet Union "could see fit to respond rather than spurn the British suggestion, all interested parties, including my government, would be at the conference table tomorrow."

BATON ROUGE (AP) — John Carroll, former movie actor-producer who had a stormy four-months career as director of the Louisiana Tourist Commission, Friday became a state ambassador-at-large.

Gov. John McKeithen named Carroll ambassador-at-large for tourism and the general promotion of Louisiana.

"Mr. Carroll has clearly demonstrated his creative and selling ability in the vital field of tourism," the governor said. "In addition to this, he has informed me that he will travel internationally during the next year. He has volunteered his services for $1 a year, and we are happy to utilize him."

Carroll quit as Tourist Commission director Wednesday, blaming the press for his troubles.

Shelepin In Conversation As Moscow Power Changes

MOSCOW (AP) — Alexander N. Shelepin was the main topic of conversation in frosty Moscow on Friday night among foreigners who watch the Kremlin from outside its red brick walls.

A diplomatic cocktail party turned into a smoky seminar on the future of the stocky Soviet leader. The interest arose from actions earlier this week by the Communist Central Committee, which runs the Soviet Union, and the Supreme Soviet—parliament, which carries out party decisions.

The Supreme Soviet voted Thursday to accept the resignation of Anastas I. Mikoyan, 70, from the Soviet presidency and to replace him with Nikolai V. Podgorny, 62.

But attention centered on Shelepin, 47. On the recommendation of Premier Alexi N. Kosygin, the Supreme Soviet relieved Shelepin as a deputy premier and head of what had been a powerful committee.

Kosygin said the party Central Committee "considered it necessary that Shelepin, as a secretary of the Central Committee should concentrate on work in the Central Committee."

The question was, what work? Communist sources said Shelepin would take over Podgorny's work. Podgorny has been the No. 2 man in the party, just behind Leonid I. Brezhnev, handling organizational matters.

Such positions are never formally announced. They just become known in the mysterious ways that information reaches foreigners outside the Kremlin.

In the absence of firm confirmation for the information from these Communist sources, some foreigners thought Shelepin was sliding down rather than up. They cited a sketchy published report on the Central Committee meeting Monday that approved the shifts.

Brezhnev proposed at the meeting that the Committee for Party and State Control be changed into a Committee for People's Control. The old committee had given Shelepin some influence in the way government units worked all over the country.

The committee's power, plus Shelepin's background as a former chief of secret police, made him a strong man in an aging leadership.

In watering down the committee's power, Brezhnev said his reference to its activities "does not, of course, mean that there are no shortcomings in its work."

Shelepin did not reply, according to the published record. And then he gave up the chairmanship of the committee and the vice premiership that went with it.

He remains, however, one of only four persons who are both party secretaries and members of the party Presidium, or steering committee. Brezhnev and Podgorny are others, along with Mikhail Suslov, ideological spokesman.

Simply leaving Shelepin relatively unemployed within the secretariat, failing to give him a new portfolio to replace the one of the now-downgraded committee, seemed unlikely to most foreigners—even those who thought Shelepin has slipped.

But it was also unlikely that Podgorny could keep the full-time job of handling party organization while taking on the ceremonial duties of president. His health has been none too good.

One suggestion from the cocktail seminar was that Ivan V. Kapitonov would take over Podgorny's work as Brezhnev's lieutenant. The Central Committee named Kapitonov as a new party secretary.

But Communist sources scouted this suggestion. They regarded Shelepin as still being too powerful a figure to be passed over by a newcomer, even one with Brezhnev's backing.

New Plant Starts Training Program

OAK GROVE (Special) — Plans are now being made for the new glove factory to be built here by Wells Lamont Corporation.

The firm has already begun setting up a pilot program to train the first workers in the plant, which will employ about 200 area people and have an annual payroll of $500,000.

West Carroll's voting electorate overwhelmingly endorsed a $450,000 bond issue proposal to finance construction of a glove factory in Oak Grove by Wells Lamont corporation in a recent parish-wide election.

The bond issue was approved by 521 voters, while 36 voted against it. In property valuation $1,699,202 was cast for the proposal and $160,825 was cast against it.

Only in Ward One did the proposal fail to gain endorsement. There, 26 voters, with $49,050 property valuation voted for the property issue and 20 voters with $79,325 valuation, voted against it.

The bond issue thus received over 84 per cent support in the popular vote, and slightly over 90 per cent support in property valuation margin.

Under plans for the bond issue a maximum of $400,000 will be issued for construction of the plant, with the bonds and interest to be retired by Wells Lamont in payment of rent over a 20 year period.

The plant will be located on the Cheatin estate property on the north side of East Main Street, just west of Oak Grove High School.

Adcock Gets Dual System Information

Sen. Jamar Adcock of Monroe said Friday he plans to release to area school system presidents and superintendents the Louisiana Legislative Council's study report on the dual systems in Ouachita Parish sometime "early next week", after he has studied the findings.

Declining to release the council's findings immediately, Adcock said the report is "exhaustive in its detail".

The report is the result of charges of "waste" and "overlap", leveled at the systems by the West Monroe Chamber of Commerce in a "Special report". Adcock has promised to lead a legislative push for a law dealing with the situation if the council report justifies it.

Reportedly favored by the Chamber of Commerce is a two-system plan, with the Ouachita River dividing the systems. Financing and administration would be by persons within the districts.

Nobel Prize Presented UNICEF In Ceremony

OSLO, Norway (AP) — The United Nations Children's Fund — UNICEF — received the 1965 Nobel Peace Prize Friday and the fund's executive director declared it was "a wonderful incentive to greater efforts in the name of peace."

"You have given us new strength," said the United States' Henry R. Labouisse, accepting for UNICEF a gold medal and a check for 282,000 Swedish crowns — $54,440.

Labouisse told the audience, including King Olav V and American comedian Danny Kaye, a UNICEF worker: "You have reinforced our profound belief that, each time UNICEF contributes, however modestly, to giving today's children a chance to grow into useful and happier citizens, it contributes to removing some of the seeds of world tension and future conflicts."

The fund, which celebrates its 19th anniversary Saturday, aids an estimated 750 million children in 118 emerging countries.

The Oslo ceremony was one of three honoring the 1965 Nobel winners.

Four of the Nobel prizes were awarded in a glittering companion ceremony in Stockholm where Swedish King Gustav VI Adolf handed them out before an audience of 2,000 invited guests.

Prof. Sinitiro Tomonaga of Japan, who shared the physics prize with two Americans, received his award in Tokyo where he is confined because of a rib injury. He accepted at a special ceremony at the Swedish Embassy.

Much attention in the Stockholm ceremony focused on Mikhail Sholokhov, the Soviet author who won the literature prize for his novel, "And Quiet Flows the Don."

The stalwart Communist, the short, broad-shouldered Cossack walked forward briskly to accept his prize. King Gustav then spoke briefly to him in English as Sholokhov, in the Cossack tradition of never bowing to a ruler, stood.

Now 60, Sholokhov said recently he felt the award came "30 years too late."

The other awards, each worth $34,440, were presented at Stockholm to:

— Prof. Julian Schwinger of Harvard University; Richard Feynman of the California Institute of Technology, sharing the physics prize with Tomonaga.

— Prof. Francois Jacob, Andre Lwoff and Jacques Monod of France, medicine.

— Prof. Robert Burns Woodward of Harvard, chemistry.

The awards were made on the 69th anniversary of the death of Alfred Nobel, the Swedish inventor of dynamite who set up the peace prize to whoever "best promoted the fraternity of nations." It has been awarded to 52 persons and eight institutions since 1901. The award is made by the Nobel Committee of the Norwegian Parliament and the other prizes are awarded by the Swedish Academy.

Instructors Take Stand On Viet War

NEW YORK (UPI) — One hundred and ninety professors at New England colleges and universities took an advertisement in Friday's New York Times to express their support of the administration's policy in Viet Nam.

However the four-paragraph statement, in the form of a petition, said the United States has made important mistakes in the past in Viet Nam. It also stated that some of the military tactics now being used raise "serious moral and political questions."

"However," the statement said, "we believe that a Viet Cong victory will spell disaster for millions of South Vietnamese and other millions in Southeast Asia."

The professors said they welcomed debate but were "seriously disturbed by that small minority of the intellectual community whose tactics have led to highly exaggerated estimates of their numbers."

Kids Afraid, Dogs Gone As Haints Haunt House

YUCAIPA, Calif. (AP) — A wall banged and bulged Friday in Kenneth Cannon's home. Mysterious gusts of air wafted through the residence.

"I don't believe in ghosts," said Billie Cannon, "but the children are afraid to stay at home. And the dog moved out, and won't come back."

The family has been witnessing the mysterious events since Monday. A hallway wall has bulged and shattered, pounding noises have echoed through the house, and air blasts - seeming to come from a solid concrete floor - have raised a rug, belied out a picture window, and ruffled Mrs. Cannon's skirts.

Man Pleads Not Guilty To Charges

A 22-year-old Monroe man answered two counts in Fourth District Court Friday and faced a third — negligent homicide — after he was arrested in the Wednesday hit and run death of one child and the injury of another.

Troy W. Daniel Friday pleaded not guilty to charges of negligent injury and negligent driving stemming from the death of Gwendolyn Diane (Susie) Walden, nine, and the injury of her sister, Sherrell, six, Wednesday on Cypress Street in West Monroe.

Daniel was bound over to the Ouachita Parish grand jury for consideration of the negligent homicide count. Another charge, driving while under the influence of intoxicating beverages, was not filed Friday, but the charge is pending.

Daniel was arrested Wednesday night when his car matched the description of the auto that struck the two children.

Funeral for the child will be held at 10 a.m. today at the Calvary Baptist Church in Vidalia with the Rev. B. A. Nolan officiating. Burial will be in the Natchez, Miss. city cemetery by Young's Funeral Home of Ferriday.

The Cannons have been joking about the mystery so it wouldn't frighten their children, Billy, 12, Dee, 10, and Vickie, 8. It hasn't been too successful. The children are getting scared.

Could it be a poltergeist - the playful, noisy ghost of folklore? Yucaipa has never had one before. What else could it be?

Sheriff's deputies don't know. Waterworks men don't know. Gas company crewmen don't know. Neither do building inspectors, a geology professor, nor a reporter.

Mrs. Cannon says the house acts up for an hour or two in the morning and again in the evening. The poltergeist, if that's what it is, keeps a pretty close schedule.

On one occasion, she reported the cover popped off the gas heater in a bedroom. Ceramic objects fell from wall shelves and shattered.

Land slippage, house slippage, nearby water drilling have been blamed, without proof. Likewise ghosts. The dwelling is one of numerous four-year-old homes in an tract. None of the others has been affected.

So far the family has refused to abandon ship. As Mrs. Cannon puts it: "You get so you have to laugh about it, or otherwise it doesn't take too long to go off the deep end."

Not so brave, however, is the Cannons' poodle-cocker. The first two days he hid in the bathroom during the disturbances. But Thursday he moved in with a neighboring family.

Commented Mrs. Cannon: "He wouldn't even eat his hamburger! And he loves it."

'The Fugitives'

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — The FBI said Friday its agents arrested an Army deserter Thursday night while he was playing saxophone with a rock and roll band called "The Fugitives."

Daniel Raymond Fravel, 29, Santa Rosa, Calif., was arrested at a local nightclub. The FBI said Fravel was declared deserter from Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. Oct. 10.

Worm Begins To Turn

When a so-called noble cause passes the point of reason and begins to impose more wrongs and discriminations than it corrects, the tide of public opinion swings in a new direction. Those bearing the brunt of these wrongs and discriminations become "the worm that turns" on its tormentors.

Such a situation has developed in California following many senseless racial demonstrations, with the rioting in which the Watts community, a suburb of Los Angeles, was torn asunder, became the most insane of all. Although that community is mostly composed of Negroes and most of the business buildings were owned by Negroes, racial rioters for several days tore the town apart for no other reason than that they wanted to demonstrate. Apparently it would have been more logical for the rioters to attack a white community but that, too, would have been senseless without a greater cause than was shown in Watts.

A special story out of Los Angeles stated:

"The white backlash from the Negro riots here last August still persists, and the principal beneficiary is Mayor Samuel W. Yorty of this city.

"Among the many whites who resent or fear the Negro as a consequence of the violence in the South Side Watts district, the 56-year-old Yorty is regarded as a standup guy.

"Yorty is esteemed by these people — and by those who disliked or rejected the Negro long before Watts — for a number of reasons. Most of them have to do with his early and consistent defense of Los Angeles police, and especially of tough Chief William H. Parker, against acrimonious criticism by the Negro community.

"The political support Yorty had undoubtedly lost among Negroes has been more than compensated for by gains among white voters who were not hitherto identified with his cause."

Political public opinion polls conducted on a statewide basis show this to be true. Though mayor of the state's largest city and perhaps the nation's largest as well, Yorty was little more than a name in the rest of California in the pre-Watts era. Since then his political fortunes have moved upward sharply.

A month after the riots the respected State Poll showed that if Yorty were the Democratic candidate for governor next year he would stand a better chance than incumbent Governor Edmund G. Brown to defeat all Republican challengers whose names still figure in the race. Findings by the likewise respected California Poll, published recently, indicated a further pickup in Yorty's strength.

In this poll, Governor Brown trailed behind both former Governor Goodwin Knight and Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco. In a hypothetical contest with Actor Ronald Reagan, Republican, Yorty scored considerably better than Brown.

Thus, California appears to have demonstrated that it is one of a number of states which have awakened to the fact that they do not want the nation to be ruled by its 10 per cent Negro population, although propagandists of that race are striving for such a goal by making demands far beyond equal rights and by asking discrimination in favor of their race that is as bad or worse than the discrimination they have claimed against their race.

While Yorty's stand for law and order, even on the part of Negro demonstrators, is commendable, the nation's plights from racial and economic standpoints almost certainly could be eased by the election of a Republican governor and by a California majority for a Republican in the 1968 presidential race. Even though Yorty backed Richard M. Nixon against John F. Kennedy in the 1960 presidential race and thus showed himself to be against some of the Democratic party's liberal positions, the election of a Republican governor of California and the carrying of that state by a Republican candidate for President could aid greatly in restoring the balance of power in this country.

Reagan, the actor, a staunch Goldwater Republican, might easily make the most colorful and powerful candidate in any race in California, despite the showing of the political polls at this early date.

De Gaulle's Debacle

President Charles de Gaulle's failure to win a majority in a popular election in France for the presidency must have seemed to him like the worst sort of debacle. It was a painful blow to his pride and prestige and meant that if he wished to continue as the head man of France he would have to lower himself by entering a runoff election.

Of course, with five men in the race, a majority vote for De Gaulle would have been a tremendous victory for him and that was what he wanted and what he had asked, and probably expected, the people to give him.

De Gaulle received 44 per cent of the vote, for a total of 9,322,216 Francois Mitterrand was given 32 per cent, with a total of 6,797,198; and Jean Lecanuet received 16 per cent, with 3,366,112.

About 85 per cent of the electorate cast their ballots, leaving the abstention rate the lowest in post-war history.

This was the first time De Gaulle had gone before the people in a popular vote. He did it under the presidential system he had inaugurated. It was the second time in French history the electorate had participated directly in a presidential election. The first time was in 1848.

Without much doubt, De Gaulle's disunity with other European countries and his frequently demonstrated non-cooperation with, or open animosity toward, the United States played a part in his failure to gain a majority.

Lecanuet, 45, called a middle-of-the-roader, who, probably erroneously, styled himself the "French Kennedy," cut sharply into De Gaulle's support and was credited with causing De Gaulle to fail to get a majority, although Lecanuet ran behind Mitterrand.

A centrist Senator, Lecanuet's main plea was for a united Europe and he was blamed for dividing the French voters. Although he was in third place, practically all of his votes were carved out of the broad center of the political spectrum which De Gaulle had considered his private domain.

Former Premier Michel Debre said: "In the name of Europe, M. Lecanuet made himself the instrument of French disunity. In the name of democracy, he made himself the instrument of disorder in the republic."

As far as the United States and Europe are concerned, improved relations could have been expected if Lecanuet had been able to make it into the runoff and if he could have been elected. It is difficult to see, under the present circumstances, how France or the United States or Europe or the world could profit by either the withdrawal of De Gaulle from the political scene or by his defeat.

Mitterrand was supported by Communists, Socialists and some Radical Socialists and if he should become the top man of France a sharp turn toward the left could be expected.

To prevent that from happening, it appears necessary for De Gaulle to carry on, despite the sting of not getting a majority in the first race. There is not much doubt of his ability to defeat Mitterrand, who probably got nearly his full vote in the first race.

LBJ Told Ahead Of Rate Hike

Interest Boost No Surprise To President

PRESIDENT JOHNSON knows a lot more about the Federal Reserve Board's headline discount rate hike than he has let on.

That's why his two-hour "confrontation" with Reserve Chairman William McChesney Martin turned out to be so amicable and conciliatory. There was no reason why it shouldn't have been.

While they differ on an interest boost at this time, the Board's 4-to-3 action was no surprise to the President.

Also, from inside accounts, he isn't as miffed as he professes to be.

Knowledgeable Reserve and Treasury Department sources are pointedly intimating the following:

The President knew in advance that Martin would ask the Reserve Board to increase the discount rate by 1/2 per cent — and he had the votes to put it over.

No pressure was exerted on any of the board members to block Martin. J. Dewey Daane, appointed by President Kennedy and the "swing man" on the board, might have been won over, but no effort was made to stop him from siding with Martin.

Treasury Secretary Fowler knew within minutes the board's secret ballot and immediately informed the President at his Texas ranch.

The following day, an administration source leaked the closely guarded story to a Washington newspaper which published it the day before the board was slated to announce the rate hike.

It is also significant that administration with direct access to the President are privately saying, "He has everything to gain and little to lose" by Martin's stand.

They point out that if the economy is adversely affected, Martin will get the blame; if all goes well and the boom continues, Johnson will claim the credit.

C. Canby Balderston, board vice chairman and Eisenhower appointee, whose term expires at the end of this month, is definitely slated to be replaced. That will give Johnson an assured majority of four.

IN FATHERS' FOOTSTEPS — John Eisenhower, 43-year-old son of the former President, is eyeing the political arena.

The West Pointer, who retired as a lieutenant colonel in 1963 to join the staff of a New York book publisher and do literary work for his father, is taking soundings of possibly running for office next year.

These backstage feelers are general and not aimed at any particular office. Close friends, however, are indicating young Eisenhower is "thinking" of seeking the governorship or a seat in the House of Representatives. On both he faces difficult hurdles — from veteran Republican officeholders.

Representative Richard Schweiker, Pa., is making no secret of his ambition to succeed Governor William Scranton. Schweiker hasn't announced yet, but he is giving every indication of intending to do so soon. He has powerful party and other ties, and would be a formidable opponent for young Eisenhower to tackle in a primary challenge.

The same is true of a House seat. Representative Paul Dague, R-Gettysburg, has been a member of Congress for 20 years and is strongly entrenched. Should he decide to retire, that would open the way for young Eisenhower. But Dague, a World War I Marine veteran, has given no hint of that so far.

GOP POWDER KEG — National Chairman Ray Bliss is flatly refusing to put an anti-Birch Society resolution on the agenda of the Republican Coordinating Committee meeting this coming Monday.

This was sought by Idaho's Governor Robert Smylie with the backing of the other four gubernatorial members of the committee — Rockefeller of New York, Scranton of Pennsylvania, Romney of Michigan, Love of Colorado. Smylie is chairman of the Republican Governors Association.

Strenuous inner party efforts are being made to persuade the group to drop the dynamite-loaded Birch Society issue. But so far they are standing pat.

Smylie intends to offer a resolution condemning the society on various grounds.

Bliss is saying privately he will rule this out of order, contending it is outside the scope and purpose of the coordinating committee. In its initial declaration, the committee stated its aim is to "broaden the advisory base on national party policy; set up task forces to study and make recommendations for dealing with the problems that confront the people of the nation; stimulate communication among members of the party and others in developing a common approach to the nation's problems."

Bliss argues Smylie's resolution does not meet these specifications.

RALPH de TOLEDANO

Lyndon Johnson And Vanishing Consensus

THE MAGIC OF the Lyndon Johnson personality diminishes with each day that he remains sequestered in his camp along the Pedernales. It was the steady application of his muscle that gave the personality luster, and as I have on other occasions remarked, no one can be an absentee President for long without a diminution of his prestige.

For one thing, there is a brutality to the politics of power which recognizes the many small voices which ask why Mr. Johnson has remained for so long away from a city and center of power so uniquely his own. At every hand, these voices ask questions, probably unfairly. But they have their effect on those who wish to squat on the Presidential preserves.

More important than this is the effect of distance on the management of the nation's affairs. More than one observer has suggested that the open break between LBJ and William McChesney Martin, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, would not have taken place had the President been actively at the helm of his Administration.

THIS IS NOT to say that Mr. Martin would not have fought as vigorously for the credit restrictions which he was able to ram through the FRB were Mr. Johnson working out of the White House. But it is more than likely that he would not have been able to muster the necessary votes. It should be added here, however, that the President had given Mr. Martin a wonderful lever by using stockpiled metals as a club with which to belabor the business community. Mr. Johnson achieved his purposes by threatening to throw these stockpiles into the open market. But Americans in all stations of life and the economy saw in this an abuse of a President's already vast powers.

Without any political intent, Mr. Martin's success in raising interest rates has weakened the consensus so dear to Mr. Johnson's heart and will encourage others to mount their own raids on White House power. Congress, which for the most part has played timid suitor to the President, will be emboldened — and Mr. Johnson's legislative program will be the first to suffer.

The deflationary effect of the Federal Reserve Board's action will immediately counter inflationary pressures on the economy. In the long run, this will be healthy, and it will help to maintain the general level of prosperity for a much longer period than the most optimistic of Administration prognosticators.

BARRY GOLDWATER

McNamara's Viet Nam Trip Called Useful

DEFENSE SECRETARY Robert McNamara's trip to Viet Nam will be useful only if it finally forces him to follow the advice of men who know about war. His arrogant disregard of such advice so far has marked his administration of the Defense Department as the worst in its history. He should stop trying to run the whole show himself.

It is speculated that the McNamara trip will result in heavy bombardment pressure upon Viet Cong supply lines, which merely brings McNamara up to date on advice that has been given at least for the past year.

But on the basis of past performance, there is little reason to jump for joy over this trip. He has been there six times. Each trip has been a failure in terms of strengthening our efforts toward victory and most have resulted in confusion and contradictions.

In May, 1962, McNamara reported from Viet Nam that "there is no plan for introducing combat forces in South Viet Nam."

In September, 1962, he found the situation "very satisfactory" and praised President Diem, whose rule he described as "a near miracle."

By his next trip, in December, 1963, Diem had been overthrown and assassinated in a coup of which McNamara must have been aware. He explained a worsening situation as due to the confusion following Diem's death. The White House at the same time was pledging that some American troops shortly would be withdrawn.

In March, 1964, McNamara had finally spun back to a position that regarded the fighting in Viet Nam as serious, but he was still saying that the solution could not be military, that it had to be largely social. The clear implication was that the Viet Cong as "social reformers" had piled up its lead not in conflict, but in warm-hearted public conviction.

McNamara reversed the statements about withdrawing troops and ruled out any policy that would seek simply the neutralization of Viet Nam. (That, in turn, has been reversed by President Johnson who says he regards neutrality as a primary goal.) McNamara also had said that no action would be taken against enemy territory unless tors have believed possible. But the immediate consequence will be to strike at durable goods manufacturing by slowing down consumer buying.

FOR A LONGER time it could have a decided effect on the November 1966 elections, and worry the small businessman — and the big businessman as well. It will cause widespread concern in labor circles, which are committed to an endless inflationary spiral as a means of bringing wage increases to the rank and file. That these increases are illusory does not trouble labor leaders. On paper, they are impressive — and that's how you ward off the power drive of younger unionists who have an eye on the big jobs.

It has been a truism among economists that a tightening of credit would have a beneficial effect on United States balance of payments — halting the run on American gold — but would be political suicide. This comment is being brushed off for examination these days. And the interesting view of some is that the damage of the FRB's move will hurt the man most opposed to it, namely President Johnson.

There is some truth in this opinion. Politics is a strange business, subscribing to a logic of its own. The voter does not stop to think about responsibility for any given set of circumstances. He blames the President and his Administration for anything brutal in the country. This was patently clear in 1929, when President Hoover was taxed for a depression he did not create. National troubles, whether cataclysmic or small, require scapegoats.

DISCUSSING THIS with a group of political experts, I could not argue against their judgment that Republicans will profit most from the rise in interest rates and whatever temporarily unfortunate economic results accrue from it. This is paradox, for by and large, it is the conservative who has pointed a warning finger at the inflationary actions of the Johnson Administration and called for measures in line with what the FRB has done.

Turnabout is, of course, fair play. The Kennedy Administration profited from policies that were being implemented in the last days of General Eisenhower's tenure at the White House. The space and missile programs are but two examples. If President Johnson and the Democratic Party are hurt by Mr. Martin's insistence on holding the line against inflation, it may be unfair. But that, to paraphrase Madison Avenue, is how the image crumbles.

BY MAY, 1964, and trip number five, that McNamara bubble had burst. It had become clear, even to him, that the Viet Cong was not engaged in a social action program, that it was waging a bloody military campaign and that the United States could no longer duck its grim responsibility.

True to form, however, he still insisted on trying to carry water on both shoulders. "The war is very real," he said, yet he still did not feel we would have to "substantially" increase our troop commitments. All we had to do was increase our "pressure."

It was after this double talk that McNamara finally took another look at the fighting and adopted our present troop-heavy more aggressive stance. But he has permitted such Viet Cong supply bases as the capital of Hanoi to remain privileged sanctuaries.

McNamara has steadily ignored his military advisers. Maybe this trip at long, tragic last has opened him to ideas other than his own and those of his palace guard.

World's Tallest Concrete Build

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A 51-story office block to be built in Johannesburg will be the tallest reinforced concrete building in the world, its backers say.

American skyscrapers higher than this projected 730-foot building are all of steel-frame design, architect David Hughes of New York told a news conference.

It will be part of a $70-million plan called Carlton Center, including a 37-story hotel. Nearly five mid-city blocks will be used, with the two buildings occupying 35 per cent of the site. This will leave 3 1/2 acres of open space for plazas and gardens.

The main office building, all air conditioned, will have an observation lounge at 700 feet. The hotel will resemble the letter "Y" and lower floors, housing ballrooms and restaurants, will be constructed with steel pillars.

Completion is scheduled in 1971. The American architecture firm of Skidmore, Owings & Merrill is working with a South African group. Harry Oppenheimer, South African multimillionaire, is a backer.

Draft Board Makes Error

DETROIT (UPI) — Members of a draft board in Detroit Thursday admitted they made a procedural error in reclassifying the draft status of two University of Michigan students who had participated in a Viet Nam protest demonstration, according to the students' attorneys.

The students, reclassified 1-A because they participated in an October Viet Nam sit-in in which Selective Service officials claimed "obstructed the business proceedings" at the Ann Arbor, Mich. board, were given an appeal hearing here Thursday.

Hunch Says Packers Will Edge Baltimore

By MIKE RATHET
NEW YORK (AP) — Baltimore or Green Bay?
The big puzzle for the pro football selector this weekend is what figures to be a rugged defensive struggle between the Colts, who have lost quarterback Johnny Unitas, and the Packers, who have been unable to find their offense.
"Championships are won on defense," says Green Bay Coach Vince Lombardi, and it would be easy to agree. But the Packers are No. 1 in passing defense and the Colts No. 1 in rushing defense.
So there's really no clue — just a hunch that says: Green Bay.
Here's the full 50 round, all games Sunday unless otherwise noted, after last week's 7-3 job lifted the over-all record to 46-6 for a .629 percentage.

Duke Pulls Upset, Tops UCLA Five

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke's Blue Devils blitzed UCLA's Bruins with a first half steamroller Friday night and coasted to a 82-66 basketball victory.
Duke, No. 6 in The Associated Press poll, used fleet Mike Lewis and Bob Verga to shatter the Bruin defenses for a comfortable 13 point halftime lead.
Lewis, Verga, Steve Vacendak and Jack Marin — Duke's top four — carried the scoring load as the Blue Devils broke an early 8-8 deadlock with a string of a dozen straight points.
Marin was top scorer with 20, many of them on followup shots under the basket. The tight Duke defense held UCLA's Ken Washington to six points.
It was UCLA's first defeat of the season, and Duke's second win against a loss to South Carolina, an Atlantic Coast Conference opponent. The two teams meet again tonight in Charlotte, N.C.

Duke handled UCLA's full court press without difficulty in the first half, and the hot shooting of Marin, Lewis, Vacendak and Verga carried the Blue Devils to a 41-21 lead five minutes before the rest period.
Verga got 13 points in the first half, Lewis and Marin 11 each and Vacendak 10. Lewis also gathered in 18 rebounds.
UCLA closed the gap somewhat on two steals by Washington, both converted by Mike Lynn, but couldn't cope with the hot-shooting Blue Devils, who converted 19 of 43 field goal tries in the first 29 minutes.
At halftime it was 47-34 Duke.

Weston skinned Eros, 59-48 with Louis McConathy popping in 23 points for the winners and Ferrell Lindsey sinking 21 for Eros.
Quitman goes against Weston at 1:30 p.m. today in the first semi-final with Jonesboro meeting Simsboro at 3 p.m.

RONNIE WIGGINS leaps high above two Caldwell opponents to grab a rebound for the West Monroe Rebels who eventually topped the Spartans 45-38 in the first game of the second round of the News-Star-World triple-headers Friday. Wiggins was the Rebels' top rebounder as he collected 11. West Monroe's Richard Crockett (33) watches the action as Caldwell's Ronnie Darden (50) and Larry Nelson (at right of Wiggins) battle Wiggins for ball. In the center, Ouachita's Richard Hill (13) dribbles along the free throw line as Kenney Cupples (center in dark uniform) comes up to screen for him. At extreme right is Len Accardo (13) who scored 16 points for the Warriors. Other St. Frederick players are: Skeeter Lasuzzo (25); and Stanley Lewis (41). The Lions won the game 64-40. At the right, Neville's Charles Floyd goes up for two of the 18 points he scored in the Tigers' victory over Bastrop 63-45. The two rams watching Floyd are: Mike Lockwood (34); and Bill Holmer (22). Twin City Quints Win In N-S-W Finale

By JIM MATHIS
World Sports Writer
West Monroe, Ouachita and Neville racked up cage decisions in the final round of the News-Star-World tournament triple-headers Friday at the Rebels' gym.
Five players were chosen by coaches, officials and representatives of the News-Star-World's outstanding performers during the two day affair.
Members of the star quintet were: George Schaffer, West Monroe; Gary Armstrong, Ouachita; Bill Holmer, Bastrop; Eugene Rushing, Caldwell; and Jay Eppinette, Neville.
West Monroe topped Caldwell 4-38 in an afternoon tilt while Ouachita stopped St. Frederick 14-40 and Neville dumped Bastrop 63-45 in night encounters. The Tourney action got underway Thursday when three games were played at the Neville gym.
That opening round, Neville defeated Caldwell 66-40. Bastrop owned St. Frederick 71-46, and West Monroe collected a come-from-behind victory from Ouachita 55-51.

West Monroe's Rebels overcame a free throw problem that has been bothering them all season and used the charity line to defeat Caldwell 45-38.
The Spartans had just as many field goals as the Rebels (5 apiece), but the Caldwell arish quintet connected on only eight bonus tosses while West Monroe scored 15 points from the foul line. Those seven points were the margin of victory in the contest.
West Monroe jumped off to a 7-0 lead at the end of the first quarter and stretched the lead to seven points when Johnny Atkins made a layup to make the score 18-11 with 5:51 left to play in the first half.

Eugene Rushing, who finished as the game's high scorer with 17 points, hit on a 20-foot set shot with three seconds left in the half to narrow the gap to 20-19 at intermission.
The score was tied five times and the lead changed hands on four occasions in the seesaw second half.
Rushing tied the score for the first time when he hit a jumper for the Spartans with 5:56 left in the third stanza. Bonne McCarty then hit a free throw to put Caldwell in the lead for the first time with 5:17 to play in the third quarter, and up the score to 23-22.
George Schaffer put the Rebels into the lead again when he dropped in two free throws with 3:24 left in the game. Schaffer ended as the Rebs' high scorer with 14 markers.
After Rushing swished to charity tosses to knot the score at 37-37, Ronnie Wiggins pushed West Monroe into the lead to stay with a layup that came with 2:42 left to play. Wiggins played a key part in the Rebels' win as he came in during the second half to snatch vital rebounds for the West Monroe quint. Wiggins ended the game as the Rebels' top rebounder with 11 marked to his credit.

The Rebels controlled the ball for the last minute with Richard Crockett, Shaffer, and Wiggins connecting on free throws to end the game.

OUACHITA HUSTLED

A determined, scrappy St. Frederick cage quint forced Ouachita to hustle, before falling to the Lions 4-40.
And, in a St. Frederick historical first, the Warriors were even ahead of the Lions at one point in the first quarter — if only by one point.
Ouachita jumped off to a 5-0 lead in the first five minutes of the game — minutes which were full of ragged basketball.

Little Len Accardo showed that it's not the size of the dog in the fight, but the size of the fight in the dog, that's important, when he carried the Warriors to a 10-9 lead over the Lions. Accardo hit two free throws and canned two layups before Sal Miletello connected on a shot that gave the Warriors their one point lead with 55 seconds left in the opening stanza.
The lead didn't quite make it to the end of the period as Ouachita's Kenny Cupples connected on a jumper with nine seconds remaining in the quarter to return the lead to the rest of the game.
The Lions had stretched their lead to eight points by halftime when they headed for their dressing rooms with the score in their favor 27-19.
Ouachita spent the rest of the contest stretching their lead, and played replacements a majority of the final half.
But Accardo kept plugging away and finished the night with 16 points — the Warriors' high. Jimmy Hickey led the Lions with 19 points while Cupples managed 17 markers, 15 of those coming in the second half.

NEVILLE OVERCOMES

Neville overcame Bastrop 63-45 in the last tilt of the night, but the Rams played the Tigers down to the wire in the first half and only faltered midway through the third stanza.
The first quarter ended in a 12-12 deadlock. Charles Floyd carried the burden of Neville's scoring chores in that opening period as he scored 10 of the Tigers' 12 points.
Bill Holmer kept the Rams in contention during the first half as connected on three free tosses and three field goals for nine points.

The Tigers pulled ahead of the Rams for the last time when Floyd canned a field goal to make the score 20-18 with 2:40 left to play in the first half.
Neville took a 24-18 lead into the dressing rooms at halftime.
After intermission, Jay Eppinette, Floyd and Chris Turner combined to boost Neville's lead and finally pushed it to 15 points with the first basket in the final quarter. Turner cannot that goal to put the Tigers ahead 45-30.
At that point, Kenny Rains took over for Bastrop and connected on four straight field goals. Rains scored 14 of his 15 points in the last period.
But Rains and Holmer were not enough to stop the Tigers once they got rolling and Neville stretched the lead to it's highest point when Johnny Overton hit the Tigers last field goal with eight seconds left in the game.
Floyd and Turner finished as Neville's top scorers with 18 points each while Eppinette added 16 to the Tigers' cause.
Rains and Holmer topped Bastrop's list of scorers with 15 markers each. Robert Tatum managed ten points for the Rams.

New York Yankees Acquire Bob Friend

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees, hoping to regain a contending position in the American League, found a Friend in the National League Friday when they obtained veteran right-hander Bob Friend from the Pittsburgh Pirates.
Friend, 35, had an 8-12 record last season, one of his poorest in 15 years with the Pirates. "His pitching rates better than his record. He lost a lot of close ball games," insisted Ralph Houk, the Yankees' general manager.

For their part in the inter-league transaction, the Pirates received bespectacled right-

Maine Meets East Carolina in Tangerine

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Maine's Black Bears challenge East Carolina's defending Atlantic region NCAA college division champions here today in the 20th annual Tangerine Bowl football game.

A crowd of 9,000 is predicted for the sponsoring Elks Lodge 1 p.m., CST, kickoff.

The game also will be televised regionally in Maine and sections of North Carolina.

East Carolina, playing as a college division team for the first time before moving into the major category, won the title a year ago with a comeback behind 14-13 victory over Massachusetts.

Maine defeated Massachusetts 10-8 in its opener and went to the championship of the New England Conference.

Coach Harold Westerman's Black Bears, from Orono, Maine, lost only to Tampa, 2-0 on nine game schedule.

Their offense is headed by quarterback Dick Devarney, a foot-8 scrambler who passed for more than 1,500 yards this season. They also have an outstanding defense, led by line-backer John Huard. Maine held its opponents to an average of only 53 yards per game on rushing plays.

East Carolina, operating out of a high-powered single wing offense, also has an 8-1 record with its lone loss coming at the hands of Furman, 14-7.

"We hope we'll have some new wrinkles in our wing for them," East Carolina Coach Lawrence Stasavich said. "I expect it to be a high scoring game."

The Pirates have two outstanding threats in fullback George Richardson. Both throw as well as run and Alexander, with 1,587 yards total offense, broke the single season Southern conference record. He has scored 16 touchdowns.

"These boys will give us our biggest problem," Westerman said. "Because they run so well, their passing has been overlooked. But East Carolina has a well-balanced team and will present us with quite a challenge."

Lone Game

OLLA (Special) — Jena scored a 52 - 29 victory over LaSalle of Olla here Friday night in the only boys game of the LaSalle girls tournament.

The teams of Bobby Nichols and R. H. Sikes, Gay Brewer and Butch Baird, and another brother combination — Jack and Buster Cupit — were tied for second with 197.

The Heberts birdied seven holes and bogeyed one — the 162-yard seventh — to make their total 65-66-196.

Arnold Palmer and Jack Nicklaus put together a round of 65 and moved to within two strokes of the lead with a total of 67-66-65-198. Five other teams were tied for third.

Billy Casper and Homero Blancas went three strokes behind with 65-66-68-199.

Jay Hebert holed putts of 16, 8, 5, and 4 feet for four of his team's birdies. The Heberts said playing conditions over the 6,896-yard East course were ideal.

Sikes and Nichols continued their consistent good play and were able to avoid the bogey that jinxed them in the first and second round. They are 66-66-65-197 for 54 holes. Brewer and Baird collected five birdies for a 67-round and a total of 197 for the tournament.

The Cupits did all their damage on the back nine, making five birdies for a card of 32. Jacky holed an 18-foot putt on the second hole and made two other birdies.

Nicklaus and Palmer made five birdies and an eagle. The eagle was on the par-five 12th hole when Nicklaus holed a four-foot putt. Nicklaus blasted out of a bunker on the 10th hole and right into the cup 25 feet away for that birdie.

"We teamed better today," said Nicklaus. "We are now alternating shots — whichever one of us wants to go first goes first. On the first day, Arnie went first every time, then I went first every time."

Teams tied in third place with Palmer and Nicklaus are Don January-Paul Harney, Bob Shave-John Berry, Paul Bondson-Larry Mowry, Bert Yancey-Dudley Wysong, Tommy Aaron-Jack Rule.

Four Players Continue Play In Cage Game

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — A prep basketball game in the Lake Charles High School-American Press Tournament wound up with only four players left on the floor Thursday night.

Pecan Island brought only six players to the tournament and by the fourth quarter four of them had fouled out. In a gesture of sportsmanship, opposing Singer High School pulled out one of its players every time Pecan Island lost a man via fouls.

Singer won 77-26, after the game ended with only two players from each team still in action.

Braves Hold Stock Meeting Filled With Errors, Threats

CHICAGO (AP) — The Atlanta Braves held their annual stockholders meeting Friday. It was a 17-minute session accompanied by a comedy of errors and threats of a $2 million suit for mismanagement.

A posse of Milwaukee dissidents, delayed when pinched for speeding to the meeting, charged into Hall exactly 10 minutes after the Braves' 15-member board of directors was re-elected and the swift and routine shareholder session had ended.

The chamber was emptying of the nine reporters and photographers and seven minor shareholders who attended.

Then the fireworks began as the tardy group of four caught the meeting chairman, Thomas A. Reynolds, Chicago attorney and Braves vice president, packing his briefcase.

Dominic H. Frinzi, Milwaukee attorney and Democratic candidate for Wisconsin governor, blurted at Reynolds:

"I just want you to know I will file a minority stockholders' suit against the individual board members for $2 million dollars for mismanagement."

"We're not a bunch of bush leaguers. We had a first rate team in Milwaukee but second rate management."

It was Frinzi's car, which two other attorneys and a Milwaukee baseball writer also were riding, was halted for speeding on an expressway on the outskirts of Chicago. Frinzi had to surrender his driver's license to expedite the arrest which took some 15 minutes.

Frinzi came armed with five stock proxies. Harry Zaidins, Milwaukee attorney, who is Braves' star Henry Aaron's legal counsel, held 90 shares, while the other minority late-comer was Nick Catania, Frinzi's law partner, who had one proxy. The accompanying writer was Bob Wolf of the Milwaukee Journal.

Frinzi and Reynolds, who called the meeting at 9 a.m., CST, and adjourned it at 9:17, climaxed their sarcastic exchanges by shaking hands for the benefit of a photographer.

The whole episode was more comic than significant since the Braves have a much bigger headache in the state of Wisconsin's antitrust suit against the club and the rest of the National League scheduled for trial in Milwaukee Feb. 1.

In the post-meeting debate, Frinzi said he was filing his suit to "protect the good name of Milwaukee."

Reynolds retorted: "I think that is wonderful. Milwaukee is a nice name."

Reynolds, pinch hitting as chairman for regular board chairman William C. Bartholomay, who has been in Atlanta directing ticket sales, asserted: "There couldn't have been too much mismanagement. Our stock three years ago sold for 11 1/2 and now it's around 26."

Countered Frinzi: "That doesn't minimize the fact the club lost $700,000 last season and a million the year before. Maybe the stock should be selling for 40 or 50."

When the dissidents asked to see the Braves' financial records, Reynolds replied: "Too bad, the meeting is closed and they're not available. You can always go to Atlanta and look at them."

During the shareholders meeting, Reynolds recited that:

"There is no question, the Braves will open April 12, 1966, in the new Atlanta Stadium."

Atlanta advance ticket sales now approximate $900,000 and a goal of $1.5 million should easily be reached.

And that the club has 316,000 stock shares outstanding, 271,500 owned by the "Milwaukee Braves Baseball Club, Inc.," which is the Chicago-based group headed by Bartholomay. These will be transferred to the Atlanta Braves, Inc.

Tech Meets Bulldogs Of Miss. State Tonight

RUSTON (Special) — Louisiana Tech will be trying to rebound from a disappointing showing against Louisiana College as Coach Scotty Robertson's Bulldogs journey to Mississippi for games with Mississippi State and Ole Miss.

The Techsters will meet Mississippi State in Starkville tonight before moving on to Oxford and a Monday night struggle with the Rebels of Ole Miss.

2 Additional Players Ink Indian Pacts

Two more Louisiana high school football stars—half-back Raymond Nicholson of Jena and tackle Archie Pippin of Winnsboro — will attend Northeast State next fall.

The signing of the two players follows the inking of two Neville High players, tackle Steve Gilchrist and fullback Monty Moncrief.

Nicholson, who backs the line on defense, was a three-year letterman at Jena, was voted the team's most versatile player two years and was a second team all-district choice. He also lettered in track and baseball. The back, who stands 6-2 and weighs 175, is the son of Mrs. Mary Nicholson.

Pippin is one of the largest high school prospects ever signed by Northeast at 6-3 and 270. He was a four-year letterman in football and lettered three years in track and basketball. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W.L. Pippin.

Passing Contest Set In Jr. Rose

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Soggy footing is a possibility but it shouldn't hamper air-minded Henderson County College of Texas and Fullerton of California in the 20th annual Junior Rose Bowl game Saturday.

The game matches a pair of unbeaten and untied junior college squads. Henderson, from Athens, Tex., has won 10 in a row. Fullerton has won nine and is undefeated in 17 consecutive games.

The road trip will mark Tech's last appearance before the Gulf South Classic in Shreveport Dec. 17 - 18. The Bulldogs will be matched with the University of Tennessee in the opening round of that tourney.

Louisiana College dropped the Techsters from the unbeaten list Wednesday night by handing them a 72-70 defeat. Previously, the Bulldogs had beaten Little Rock University twice and Harding College.

Richard Peek, Tech's 6-11 junior center, scored 24 points against La. College to up his scoring average to 19.8, tops for the Canines. He also leads the club in rebounds with 11.5 per game.

Other top scorers for the Techsters have been captain Leon Barmore of Ruston with 17.5 points per game and George Stone of Ruston with a 16.7 norm. Stone has grabbed 7.7 rebounds per contest.

The Bulldogs will be the second Gulf States Conference team to play Mississippi State this season. Northeast State beat the charges of Coach Joe Dan Gold in the Mississippians opening game. They have also lost to Virginia Tech.

Gold's ball club will be the biggest Tech has faced this season with three starters standing 6-foot-7 or better. Leading scorer for State is 6-3 Gary Washington with 17 points per game.

Robertson commented after the Louisiana College game that the Techsters still needed work on their rebounding and team defense. He was well pleased with a zone press the Canines put up against the Wildcats.

Ogden In Semis

BERWICK (Special) — Ogden swept into the semifinals of the Berwick tournament here Friday night with a 42-39 victory over Holy Savior with 18 points.

Floyd Hendry dropped in 14 for the winners with Buddy Jennings adding 10. Corky Brown paced Holy Savior with 18 points.

Ogden plays Lockport at 9:30 a.m. today in the first semifinal game with the winner to meet the winner of the Morgan City-Berwick battle.

Finals begin at 8 p.m. with consolations an hour earlier.

White-Hot Metal That Struck Earth Was Fragments Of Large Meteor, Claimed

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A fiery object which streaked through the sky over northern states was identified by astronomers Friday as a meteor of unusual size.

White-hot pieces of the speeding chunk of cosmic debris apparently struck the earth and were blamed for setting a number of grass and woods fires.

In Michigan, several children found strange metallic particles which may have been thrown off by the disintegrating fireball as it plunged through the air Thursday night.

Brian Parent and Larry Jones, both 11, of Livonia, Mich., said they picked up a piece of lightweight grayish fused metal about the size of a baseball which fell into a field.

Smaller chunks of similar material were found by children in Warren, Mich. A search for similar evidence was under way in states ranging from New York to California.

Dr. Fred C. Hess, an associate astronomer at New York's Hayden Planetarium, said the object unquestionably was a meteor.

As it became incandescent from the friction of its high-speed passage through the atmosphere, Dr. Hess said, it blew up and scattered fragments over a wide area.

"It undoubtedly was a fireball," agreed Dr. William P. Bidelman, an astronomer at the University of Michigan. A fireball is a large meteor which throws off blazing bits of itself as it becomes hotter in its flight through the air.

Reports of the brilliant object came from Pennsylvania, Ohio,

Michigan, Indiana and parts of Canada just at dusk. A similar phenomenon, apparently a separate meteor, was spotted later in California.

This is the time of the annual Geminid meteor shower, when about 50 strike the earth's atmospheric envelope each hour compared with a normal half dozen.

Some of the debris is hardly as big as grains of sand, but even these glow so brightly that they flash across the heavens as "shooting stars."

The chunks of rock, metal and dust which form the Geminid shower are believed to be the remains of an old, broken-up comet.

At Elyria, 20 miles west of Cleveland, Ohio, firemen put out 10 grass fires in one small area. Mrs. Ralph Richards, who lives nearby, said the flames broke out after a fiery object the size of a volleyball plunged to earth. State troopers and Air Force men searched near Kecksburg in southwestern Pennsylvania after reports of blue flashes on the ground following the meteor's passage. The search turned up nothing.

In Lapeer County, Mich., deputy sheriffs checking a report that a flaming object fell into a field found only some pieces of metallic foil four to six inches long and a quarter of an inch wide. They said similar material was found there two years ago. Its origin was a mystery. The object sighted in California was described by four highway patrolmen as having a greenish glow and a tail. They said it appeared to have exploded and fallen somewhere in Humboldt County, in the northwest corner of the state.

'Santa and the Zabbazara Bus'

By LUCRECE BEALE
SYNOPSIS: Mr. D's bus breaks through a frozen lake at the bottom of a cliff in Santa Claus Land. A strange monster lifts the broken bus and its occupants out of the lake.

CHAPTER SIX
THE FABULOUS DUNKLEBUM
"Hooray! We're safe!" cried the little lost boy as the shining monster deposited the bus on dry land.

The crocodile shook her head admiringly. She said she had never met so strong and brave a creature as the monster and if she had not been so ugly she would have kissed him to show her gratitude.

Lights all along the beast's arms blinked and fluttered with embarrassment. "I am ugly myself," he said. "As you can plainly see."

Well, he certainly wasn't handsome. He had a flat mushy face like a smashed-in tomato. He was fat and stooped and his many glittering arms hung from his shoulders like willow trees branches.

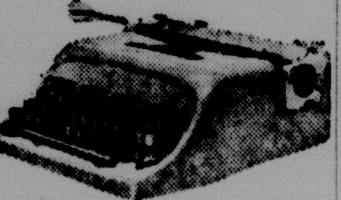

"What are you?" gasped Mr. D, striving with all his might to see out of his poor crossed eyes.

"I'm the friendless Fabulous Dunklebum," said the creature in his tiny squeaky voice.

"I'm the only one of my kind. I've lived all my life at the bottom of this cliff, where I can hide my lights in a cave so I won't frighten anyone."

"I think you are gorgeous," said the crocodile, trying to hide her missing teeth. "You have magic, too," said the donkey. "Those lights are very magical. In fact I think you have more magic than anyone I've ever seen."

"Except the Voodoo man!" exclaimed the little boy. "And now the Voodoo man is going to get Santa Claus!"

Mr. D shook his head. "Not yet. We may still get there in time. We can fix the bus by the light of the Fabulous Dunklebum!"

He told the creature of the Voodoo man, who was off to cast a spell over Santa Land. The Fabulous Dunklebum turned on all his lights as high as they would go. They lit up the whole mountainside.

Mr. D got out his tool box. It was filled with bobby pins and rubber bands and finger-nail files and chewing gum that Mr. D had used to repair the bus a hundred times before.

They found the two missing wheels and hammered them back on with the crocodile's tail. They pried open the radiator and the donkey stomped on the twisted pipes until they were straight. They fastened on the bent and broken fenders with bandage strips.

"She's good as new!" said Mr. D finally.

"Oh, hurry, hurry!" cried the little boy. "Let's go!"

They said goodbye to the Fabulous Dunklebum and thanked him for all he'd done. Then they all got on the bus and Mr. D started her up. The engine gave one gasp and quit. There wasn't any gas. It had leaked out of the punctured tank.

Mr. D groaned. The Zabbazara bus was useless. They would never get to Santa before the Voodoo man, and Santa Land would go under a spell forever.

But even as Mr. D groaned, he felt the bus jerk. The little boy cried, "He's carrying us again!"

Sure enough, the Fabulous Dunklebum had lifted the bus in his long swinging arms and was carrying it slowly up the steep mountainside.

Former Star Sentenced In Wife's Death

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — Former actor Tom Neal was sentenced Friday to one to 15 years for the fatal shooting of his wife.

Superior Court Judge Hilton H. McCabe pronounced sentence on the charge of involuntary manslaughter.

Neal, 51, was convicted three weeks ago in the death last April 1 of Gail Neal, 29, found shot to death in their Palm Springs home.

Ashen-faced after the sentencing, Neal told newsmen: "Even God has to answer to Judge McCabe I guess. This is his vengeance."

Judge McCabe had refused to grant probation despite pleas by Neal's attorneys.

The California Adult Authority will determine how long Neal must serve but it must be at least one year. The eight months he has been in jail will not count toward the sentence.

Neal, onetime hero of low-budget movies and principal in a celebrated fight with actor Franchot Tone, was charged with shooting his wife as she slept on a divan. She had filed for divorce some time before and he, after a trip to Chicago, had gone to her for a "soul-baring" attempt at reconciliation.

He claimed she was shot accidentally as they struggled over a gun he had placed on a table. The weapon was never found.

Neal's movie career nosedived after the 1951 battle with Tone over affections of actress Barbara Payton. Tone lost the fight, later married Miss Payton and they were divorced after seven weeks.

Rally Slated By Louisiana Tech Group

RUSTON (Special) — The Louisiana Tech Student Senate will sponsor a "Viet Nam" rally in front of Harper Hall if weather permits, or in the Student Center at 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

Rep. Joe D. Waggoner will speak at the rally which is part of a four-point Viet Nam project being coordinated by the Student Senate.

Other speakers will be Tech President F. Jay Taylor and James Norris of West Monroe, president of the Student Senate.

Presently being circulated on the campus for signatures is a resolution proclaiming the Tech student body's "confidence" and "support" of the U.S. troops in Viet Nam.

Each sorority will provide 100 Christmas cards to be sent to servicemen in Viet Nam. The Panhellenic Association is organizing this project.

"Good Cheer Boxes," collected annually by the Campus Activity Board, will this year be sent to Viet Nam rather than being distributed in the Ruston area.

Permission For TV Operation

DA NANG, South Viet Nam (UPI) — A U.S. Marine colonel wounded by Communist machinegun fire during the fighting near Da Nang Friday gave permission for a television crew to take films while his leg was amputated.

"I hope they show that film to the demonstrators at Berkeley," the another Marine standing nearby said bitterly.

The colonel, whose name was withheld, was flying a reconnaissance mission in a HU1B helicopter over the battle area 20 miles south of Da Nang and was calling in Gunships (armed helicopters and planes) on suspected Viet Cong targets.

He flew over a small village where he said he saw activity that appeared "suspicious."

"I didn't want to call in the gunships because there were women and kids in that village," the colonel said.

England Feels Winter;
Parliament Threatened

LONDON (UPI)—A wintry storm threatened the houses of parliament with flooding Friday and raked the Atlantic with gales that washed mountainous seas over a stricken freighter carrying 27 men.

Britain, France, and Holland were lashed by the storm. Six persons were known dead.

High tides sent the River Thames to within eight inches of the top of the parapet outside Britain's Parliament, and workers were evacuated from basement rooms of the building.

A shipping tragedy was threatened off southwest Ireland where crewmen clung to the flooded Greek freighter constantly, walling in heavy seas. The giant liner Queen Mary stood by during the night trying to shield the freighter from the storm with its bulk.

Seas were so high that the captain of the Queen Mary said it would be "sheer suicide" to try to remove the crew from the stricken ship. Lifeboats were smashed and three men washed overboard in an attempt to abandon the freighter hursday night.

In central London the hames overflowed into the streets at several points, one of them near Scotland Yard. A member of Parliament said the ver's threat to the building as unprecedented. Flood-

Prosecution
Rests Case
At Hamburg

HAMBURG, Ark. (Special) — The prosecution rested its case Friday in the first degree murder trial of a 34-year-old North Carolina man, Curtis Smith, before Circuit Court Judge G. B. Colvin here.

Smith is charged with the March 1, 1963 knife slaying of 20-year-old Tommy Rogers in a service station robbery.

Star witness for the prosecution Friday was Monroe Negro M. C. Tally, convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment in the same slaying.

Frank Wynne, prosecuting attorney, said the state would prove that Smith aided and assisted Tally in the killing.

On the stand, Tally — who pleaded guilty at his own trial — pointed out Smith and said he (Smith) was the one who gave him the knife and drove to Hamburg from Crossett. Tally testified that Smith pointed out the gas station and said "go get some money."

Next on the stand was Imogene Taylor who testified that she was living with Smith in Crossett at the time of the crime. She identified a knife presented by the state as the murder weapon as one belonging to Smith prior to the crime.

She testified that she saw Tally and Smith together and added that the day following the crime, Smith — who she said had only worked a few days during his stay in Crossett — handed her $25 for "back rent" and $8 for groceries.

The state called other witnesses — including Smith's Crossett landlord, Nolen Jeffress — who testified that they saw Tally and Smith together.

James Barker, court appointed attorney, said in his opening statement Thursday that the defense will seek to prove that Smith did not know Tally.

Handwriting
Big Problem

One of the biggest problems postal employees face is illegible handwriting, and at Christmas time, when mail volumes skyrocket, this becomes a major problem, postmaster of the Twin Cities said Friday.

Another significant problem is the number of parcels delayed or actually undeliverable because of poor wrapping or packing. The postmasters urged that special care be taken to see that each package mailed is tightly stuffed and that nothing rattles around inside.

Monroe Postmaster Woodrow W. Hathorn and West Monroe Postmaster Homer B. Roark said the use of ZIP codes helps speed up the process of mailing, because of the city and state are written in poor handwriting, the ZIP code will direct the mail to the proper post office and that clerks there might possibly be able to figure out to whom the mail should be delivered.

Research Grants
Will Aid State

WASHINGTON (Special) — Department of Agriculture has announced the award of research grants worth $51,500 to support Louisiana scientists who will work to produce new knowledge essential to reducing cotton production costs.

The grants will be made to the Louisiana Agricultural Experiment Station at Baton Rouge. One study on biological control of diseases of cotton fruit will be conducted by the department of plant pathology at costs of $25,000. Grand Jury
Refuses To Indict Cop

FRANKLIN, La. (AP) — The St. Mary Parish grand jury refused Friday to indict a Jeanerette policeman charged with manslaughter in the fatal shooting of a Negro man last July 31.

At the same time the grand jury indicted Russell Alexander for murder in the brutal slaying of Mrs. Aline Boulliard, sister-in-law of Rep. Edwin Willis, D-La.

Patrolman Nolan Landry of Jeanerette had been arrested for manslaughter in the death of Clifford Charles Jr.

The shooting followed a chase at speeds up to 100 miles an hour in which the officer had sought to stop Charles for a traffic violation. When Charles drove into his yard and climbed from the car, Landry shot him. The officer said he thought the Negro was going for a gun.

Mrs. Boulliard was beaten and stabbed to death at her St. Martinville home last September. Her body was hidden in a remote area and not found for a week.

Officers said Alexander guided them to the body and signed a statement admitting his part in the crime.

At the request of Alexander's attorney, the case was transferred to St. Mary Parish on grounds he could not get a fair trial in St. Martin Parish because of the publicity surrounding the case.

Astrolat Lovell Fails To Spot Directed Light

KOKEE, Kauai, Hawaiian ground station conducted count-down for start of the experiment (AP) — Astronaut James A. Lovell Jr. failed to spot a laser beam directed into space Friday from the Kokee space-tracking station.

Lovell also apparently had a little trouble with the geography of Kauai.

The laser experiment is an attempt to conduct a voice conversation over an extremely strong light beam. The test has been rescheduled for a later orbit of Gemini 7.

Astronauts Lovell and Frank Borman came barreling along the Hawaiian Islands chain on their 79th revolution Friday.

Plans called for the Kokee laser ground experiment to be turned on to channel the narrow beam of green light up to the speeding spacecraft 150 miles overhead. Lovell couldn't see it.

He talked to the Kokee capsule communicator but not via the light beam.

Lovell's voice was loud and clear, it sounded no different from a voice over the telephone.

As Lovell approached, the conversation went like this:

Lovell: What will be the angle?

(Kokee then gave Gemini 7 the azimuth reading so that the spacecraft could lock on to the laser beam coming up from the ground. The angle was 72.6 degrees.)

Lovell: We're over some atolls (probably French Frigate Shoal or some other atolls between Midway and Nihoa Island).

Kokee: Roger, stand by to mark.

Lovell: Roger.

Note Home Arrived At Death Time

HOULTON, Maine (AP) — "Don't worry about me. I know how to fight, but you never know when one bullet will have your name on it."

"But I can't go around thinking about stuff like that," Army Specialist 4 C. Patrick King, 26, wrote his sister from Viet Nam, "or I may not be here today."

The letter was written on Thanksgiving Day. Mrs. Edward Duffy had scarcely had time to read it when she got word her brother had been killed.

King's letter gave a graphic account of life as a combat infantryman.

"Sis, we're right on the front lines," he wrote, "and every night we can hear the Viet Cong out front. Whenever we hear something we start shooting."

"Last night one Viet Cong soldier fired just as I was going to sleep and I jumped clear off the cot I was lying on and into my foxhole."

"That's what we live in over here. Mine is five feet deep and six feet long and four feet wide for the roof I have two layers of sandbags. That's to protect us from mortar rounds. One bunker got hit the other night with an 81mm mortar and he (the occupant) had two layers. He was lucky it didn't go through. Some of these guys have only one layer. I hope they never get hit."

King had been in the service six years. His widow, Sonja, is in Germany with their three children.

Solon Says Air Raids Affecting Viet Cong

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — Rep. Clark MacGregor, R-Minn., just returned from Viet Nam, said Friday the United States has been bombing Viet Cong supply lines in Laos and also has been hitting them from the ground.

MacGregor told an airport news conference that Americans are "poorly informed to assume we are doing nothing to interdict the Viet Cong supply lines through Laos," adding: "We are interdicting from the air and on the ground in Laos."

The government never has officially acknowledged any bombing of Laos, but government sources said as early as last January that some bombing there had been going on for at least a month.

Following the news conference, MacGregor said the bombing raids were not on a large scale, although they had been intensified in recent weeks. He said the raids were taking place in very remote, rugged country, away from population centers.

He did not elaborate on the subject of ground action.

The congressman said his three-day visit to Viet Nam included meetings with U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge and Gen. William C. Westmoreland, commander of U.S. troops there, last Sunday.

MacGregor said he was under the impression that Secretary of State Dean Rusk had disclosed the bombing Thursday. When told that Rusk had not acknowledged the bombing, MacGregor said he believed it was a matter of common knowledge.

MacGregor suggested that all further U.S. aid to South Viet Nam be channeled through the Southeast Asia treaty Organization, and that France and Pakistan be dropped from SEATO in favor of South Korea and Malaysia.

He also proposed a "Cuba-type quarantine" such as that in 1962 to block military supplies from the North Vietnamese port of Haiphong.

Two Men Killed Gangland Style

NEWTON, Mass. (UPI) — Two men were shot and wounded in gangland-fashion early Thursday at the rear of a pizza parlor.

Richard Wallace, 36, of Watertown, and Neil Rudy, 33, of Boston's Brighton Section, were about to enter their car at the rear of the restaurant when a late model sedan pulled up and shots rang out.

Police said more than 20 shots were fired at the two men from automatic weapons. Wallace, co-owner of the pizza shop, suffered a hand wound.

Pharmacy Hearing Set On Drugs For Needy

BATON ROUGE (AP) — Redfield Bryan of Baton Rouge, president of the State Board of Pharmacy, said Friday open hearings will be held soon into reports of irregularities among druggists who provide medicine for the needy on old age welfare rolls.

Bryan said he told Gov. John McKeithen at a top-level conference on the many-sided probe "that the board is investigating the welfare department charges at this time, and that the results of these investigations will be brought before the board, with our attorneys, very shortly to determine what action should be taken and to set a date for the hearings."

He said he believed the hearings would be held in about the third week of January.

McKeithen called Bryan to confer with Welfare Commissioner Garland Bonin, chairman

Seaborne Spy Becomes Permanent Guam Mark

AGANA, Guam (AP) — The Soviet Union's permanent seaborne spy vigil on Guam has passed its first birthday and achieved the status of a landmark.

Day in, day out, a Soviet trawler bobs at anchor just outside the three-mile limit of this U.S. Pacific outpost, off Apra harbor.

The trawler sees the Polaris missile submarines and the B2 bombers come and go. No one has the slightest doubt that the information is transmitted promptly to Moscow, Peking, Hanoi and the Communist guerrillas in Viet Nam.

The submarine and bombers crews ignore the floating spy and get on with their tasks — patrolling the Pacific and bombing the Vietnamese Communists.

Apra treats the whole thing as a tourist attraction. Important visitors go out to spy ship by launch, and some trade the crew American beer for vodka, or American cigarettes for the Russian kind.

The spying vigil began on Nov. 28, 1964, when a Soviet trawler arrived just 24 hours before the Polaris submarine tender Proteus tied up off what is now called Polaris Point.

A week later, the first Polaris-armed submarine in the Pacific, the Daniel Boone, slipped into Apra harbor and berthed alongside the Proteus.

The action was instituted by United after Penzoid bid last November of $41 per share — 35 above the market price — brought an offer of more than five million shares from stockholders.

United, of Shreveport, La., claimed that this was a move on the part of Penzoid, of Oil City, Pa., to take an active interest in the affairs and policy involving the sale of natural gas to consumers, and would cause "irreparable damage" to Penzoid.

Whitney North Seymour, Penzoid's attorney, argued there was nothing illegal in the company's offer to buy up to 40 per cent of United stock. He added that Penzoid was ready to buy three million shares and had planned to spend approximately $200 million for them.

Seymour said United's motion was an attempt to interfere with a legal purchase program between a willing buyer and willing sellers.

Day Center Post Filled

Dave M. Kaplan was named Friday night as a member of the board of directors of the Ouachita Day Care Center, to fill the vacancy left by the new president, Charles V. Calderone.

Kaplan, a representative to the school from the local AMVETS Club, will be the second man on the board from the veteran group which helps to support the day care center. Calderone is the other AMVET on the board.

The AMVETS, at the regular meeting Friday night, completed plans for the annual Christmas party which they will give for the 12 youngsters at the center. The party will be given at 10 a.m. Tuesday, Dec. 21.

Calderone said students from the Neville High School Speech Club, sponsored by Mrs. Bill Blanchard, will assist with the Christmas party. Santa Claus will be on hand to pass out gifts for the youngsters.

Debt Aids Come From Neighbors

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — U.S. Dist. Judge Ben C. Green put John W. Hayden on two years probation Friday after being told that the Youngstown area man's neighbors had joined in raising $6,000 to make restitution of funds at the bank where Hayden worked.

Judge Green said after hearing the details that it was "highly unusual that such loyalty exists in the family and with the neighbors."

Hayden, who was employed as a collection supervisor at the Union National Bank in Youngstown from May 5, 1958, until last May 18, told authorities he used fictitious loan applications to secure money to carry out his wife's "last wish of a home of her own."

Asst. U.S. Atty. Nathaniel Jones said he was told Hayden's wife had three operations for cancer and at one point was thought to be at an incurable stage of cancer.

When Hayden was charged with making false applications to a government agency to secure loans, his neighbors got together to raise the cash to make restitution, Jones said.

Hayden's son, Jack, 18, deferred going to college, took a job instead and signed notes to pay back the neighbors, the attorney reported. A daughter, Barbara, 17, also took a job in a drug store to help with the repayment, and Hayden's wife, Stella, now has recovered to a point where she too is ready to take a job, Jones said.
